

Wojciech Chachólski, KTH, Stockholm
Three stories about complexity of fibrations

Abstract: In the talk I will illustrate three instances of how one uses the so-called “small object argument”. My goal is to explain how this argument can be used to measure complexity of fibrations. For that, I will discuss how to define and study the homotopy type of the moduli of fibrations, cellular lattices, and Bousfield localizations.